Named a best book of the year by the San Francisco Chronicle, Survivor Cafe feels like the book Rosner was born to write. Each page is imbued with urgency, with sincerity, with heartache. With heart, her words alongside the words of other survivors of atrocity and their descendants across the globe can help us build a more humane world. San Francisco Chronicle as first-hand survivors of many of the twentieth century's most monumental events, the Holocaust, Hiroshima, the Killing Fields, begins to pass away. Survivor Cafe addresses urgent questions: How do we carry those stories forward? How do we collectively ensure that the horrors of the past are not forgotten?
forgotten elizabeth rosner organizes her book around three trips with her father to buchenwald concentration camp in 1983 in 1995 and in 2015 each journey an experience in which personal history confronts both commemoration and memorialization she explores the echoes of similar legacies among descendants of african american slaves descendants of cambodian survivors of the killing fields descendants of survivors of the bombing of hiroshima and nagasaki and the effects of 9 11 on the general population examining current brain research rosner depicts the efforts to understand the intergenerational inheritance of trauma as well as the intricacies of remembrance in the aftermath of atrocity survivor cafe becomes a lens for numerous constructs of memory from museums and commemorative sites to national reconciliation projects to small group cross cultural encounters beyond preserving the firsthand testimonies of participants and witnesses individuals and societies must continually take responsibility for learning the painful lessons of the past in order to offer hope for the future survivor cafe offers a clear eyed sense of the enormity of our twenty first century human inheritance not only among direct descendants of the holocaust but also in the shape of our collective responsibility to learn from tragedy and to keep the ever changing conversations alive between the past and the present
