American republic guided activity
unit 6 (2023)

This book proposes digitalization as a promising direction for green growth and sustainable development of the economy of Central Asia. It reveals the advanced and unique hands-on and case-based experience of Central Asia in ESG management with the involvement of digital technologies and provides practical recommendations on the extension of the use of digital technologies in ESG management of the development of the green economy in Central Asia. This investment guide for Lithuania identifies those areas of economic activity which present opportunities for foreign investors and provides the investor with comprehensive information relating to the political, economic, financial, and legal framework and assesses the regulatory environment in view of the resilience of Africa's underdevelopment. What do Africans make of their determined aspirations for development? The continent of Africa has constantly drawn global attention most especially for both human and natural evils. Underdevelopment appears to be one of the most eminent threatening evils. It has plunged and promises to maintain the majority of Africa in abject poverty, insecurity, and vulnerability that perpetuates the ghost and gory of underdevelopment in Africa. Despite a proliferation of development rhetoric and initiatives, how do ordinary Africans react to repeated talk and claims of development with little evidence of transformation for the better in their material circumstances? This book interrogates the tenacity of underdevelopment amid calls for Africa to rise from its slumber and reclaim its position in global affairs as the mother continent of humankind. It contributes to the ongoing debates on why Africa remains trapped in the clutches of underdevelopment many decades after the purported end of colonialism. The book comes at a critical time in human history when the talk on Africa's underdevelopment is louder due to the ravages of economic downturns and dysfunctional conflicts, which impose a challenge to development practitioners, civil society activists, statesmen, economists, political scientists, and theorists to rethink and reconsider their role as technocrats, experts, and ambassadors of positive change in Africa and the world beyond. In view of the resilience of Africa's underdevelopment, what do Africans make of their determined aspirations for development? The continent of Africa has constantly drawn global attention, most especially for both human and natural evils. Underdevelopment appears to be one of the most eminent threatening evils. It has plunged and promises to maintain the majority of Africa in abject poverty, insecurity, and vulnerability. What perpetuates the ghost and gory of underdevelopment in Africa despite a proliferation of development rhetoric and initiatives? How do ordinary Africans react to repeated talk and claims of development with little evidence of transformation for the better in their material circumstances? This book interrogates the tenacity of underdevelopment amid calls for Africa to rise from its slumber and reclaim its position in global affairs. As the mother continent of humankind, it contributes to the ongoing debates on why Africa remains trapped in the clutch of underdevelopment. Many decades after the purported end of colonialism, the book comes at a critical time in human history.
